QUESTION 1

Why should each system user and administrator have individual accounts? (Choose TWO.)

- A. Using generic user names and passwords increases system security and reliability.
- B. Using separate accounts for each user reduces resource consumption, particularly disk space.
- C. By using individual login names and passwords, user actions can be traced.
- D. If users do not have individual login names, processes can automatically run with root/administrator access.
- E. A generic user name and password for users and security administrators provides anonymity, which prevents useful logging and auditing.
