QUESTION 1

An imaging task is created for upgrading a current environment from Windows XP to Windows 7 using Ghost and the inventory from the existing computer. A valid license key is assigned and a valid image is captured. To facilitate imaging, clients are instructed to close their applications and leave, but to leave their computers logged in so the imaging task can properly identify them. However, each attempt to assign and run the task on an endpoint computer results in failure almost immediately. What is the likely cause?

- A. The endpoint computer is incapable of running Windows 7 based on current inventory.
- B. Incorrect permissions were configured for the task when running in automation.
- C. Imaging tasks fail when executed in production on endpoint computers.
- D. The endpoint computer configuration is missing from the SBS services.
